author James Rollins delivers an apocalyptic vision of a future predicted by the distant past. In the wilds of Mongolia, a research satellite has crashed, triggering an explosive search for its valuable cargo: a code-black physics project connected to the study of dark energy—and a shocking image of the eastern seaboard of the United States in utter ruin. At the Vatican, a package arrives containing two strange artifacts: a skull scrawled with ancient Aramaic and a tome bound in human skin. DNA evidence reveals that both came from the same body: the long dead Mongol king Genghis Khan. Commander Gray Pierce and Sigma Force set out to discover a truth tied to the fall of the Roman Empire, to a mystery going back to the birth of Christianity, and to a weapon hidden for centuries that holds the fate of humanity.

We follow Alex and Isaac Weld, the most lucrative jewel thieves in the world, in their quest to steal the gem, which according to legend was once the eye of a Hindu idol named Rama Sita. Her desire is not for wealth, but for wisdom. She seeks not power, but restoration. When the dust settles over the last great adventure of the Hope Diamond, readers will understand the "curse" that has haunted its legacy is nothing more than the greed of evil men who bring destruction upon themselves. In the Eyes of God takes a hard look at what is being done to improve public education in America. The twenty-first century finds the United States in a very demanding situation regarding the economy, world affairs, and the general demise of humanity. The education of children in America seems to be the one topic that is getting some attention. With documentaries like The Lottery and Waiting for Superman, the general public is finally beginning to understand the current state of education in the country a state of which most educators have long been aware. There is a real lack of leadership in education today and a real fear of doing anything outside the norm in terms of how students learn. The poor selection and retention of talent in the classroom has taken a toll on the ability of schools to educate their students effectively. In the Eyes of God challenges the fact that only a small percentage of the school day is used to educate children. It also examines cultural proficiency and the need for educators to go beyond just cultural awareness and become more competent and proficient teachers. Most importantly, we must strive to see that no children fall through the cracks of the system and that every child receives the best education possible.

The key to understanding the plan is found in a conjoint understanding of covenant. The bible is replete with the language of covenant, and at the heart of creation it had its place. Desiring God

To see most things, one's eyes need to be open. But not so with God. If you open your eyes too wide or look too closely you're likely to miss Him while thinking you have seen Him. Most of us make this very mistake. We look at people expecting to see God. We look at religions. We even look in the mirror. Inevitably we are disappointed, because we had hoped for a nicer picture of the Divine One. Countless people have turned away from God because they thought they saw Him in a person or in a church and, quite frankly, they didn't like what they saw.

Two human streams flow through history. The Bible characterizes these streams as the sons of God and the sons of Men. They are first distinguished in Cain and Abel as either those seeking to please God, like Abel, or those who prefer only to please themselves, like Cain. The product of the streams stands in stark contrast. This is the story of the stream of life and light in those identified as the sons of God.

Through God's Eyes

Throughout the Bible, divine interaction with humanity is portrayed in almost embarrassingly human terms. God sees, hears, thinks, feels, runs, rides chariots, laughs, wields weapons, gives birth, and even repents. Many of these descriptions, taken at face value, seem to run afoul of classical thought about God's qualities of divine simplicity, transcendence, omniscience, omnipotence, omnipresence, and, especially, immutability. Traditionally, such representations have been seen as accommodations to human intellectual and moral limitations. They allowed God to be more comprehensible but did not actually describe any real part of His character, being, or interaction with humanity. References to God seeing or hearing, for example, are not deemed to represent real acts, as God is all-knowing.

This view is largely based on the Aristotelian conception of metaphors: they are rhetorical devices and should not be taken literally. Since the 1970s, our understanding of the ways in which metaphors convey meaning has become much more sophisticated. We are better able to unlock the function of human acts of God within the Bible. This book aims to explore the biblical metaphor of divine sight in Genesis and how current conceptions of metaphorical function can enrich our reading of the text and its theology.

Their Eyes Were Watching God

In his book Through the Eyes of God: A Supernatural Experience, Reverend Terrance G. Mackey, Sr., shares his personal encounter with God that began on June 28, 2010. The writer describes heaven as a beautiful place and indescribable. He tells the story of his out of body experience and how the Lord took him on a heavenly journey to show him things to come, things that are and things not to talk about. The Lord said, "I send you back with a message to the church. They have left their first love." He echoed to me John 13:34, "A new Mackey who are raised up to simply believe God and allow Him to demonstrate His mighty power. This book is a record of his journey of faith that is both simple and profound. It basically portrays the doubts and fears which beset him in his early days of struggle for a meaningful faith. Granted, this is a record of a single minister and as remarkable as it is, Rev. Mackey's account does not stand alone. There are men who have honestly faced death and heaven and they've lived to tell about it. They have discovered that those who come back from the experiences are alive to bring a message back to the church. "You left your first love." Loving God, Loving the Church and loving one another is the message that Rev. Mackey received and charged to tell the church." Dr. Marcus E. Dixon

Eye of the God

Growing up, I never took seriously the hurt and pain that a lot of Godas people go through today. It never was important to me. My life always consisted of what I wanted and the goals I wanted to achieve. It was when I moved to the city, and I felt like I was stripped of everything materialistic that I thought brought me happiness. I found out that trials, and sometimes even being without a home, caused me to have a new perspective on life. I found out that life is a gift that we tend to take advantage of. During this time in my life, God showed me that true happiness does not come from wealth and materialistic things, but from being in the peace of God. I truly became saturated in Godas peace when I started having compassion in the needs of others. As I went through these trials, I saw life from Godas perspective. He wanted me to see life through his eyes, and as I began to focus on life from Godas eyes, my life started to become more clear. Through Godas eyes, he views those who are hurt, and helpless,
